Kevin Pinkowski is a professional engineer with sixteen years of experience in the civil engineering design and construction industry. His experience includes site development and design, storm water management, sanitary sewer design, cost estimating, grading, and utility coordination, as well as construction materials testing and inspections, and geotechnical explorations and engineering. Kevin graduated with a BS in civil engineering from KU in 1998, and started his career as a field engineer performing inspections and construction materials testing on construction sites of all shapes and sizes, as well as working on the back of a geotechnical drill rig from time to time. After 9 years of doing that, he decided to change up his career, and look at the industry from a different angle by coming into the office as a design engineer. He has been doing that ever since, and recently started with BHC Rhodes in January of this year, after 14 years at Kaw Valley Engineering.

Kevin lives in midtown Kansas City, MO with his wife, Allison, and children Emma (2) and Samuel (2 months). Kevin is passionate about many things, with several hobbies that greatly divide his free time. Some of his passions/hobbies are cooking, tinkering, running/cycling, environmental initiatives of many types and sizes, woodworking, making old things new again, and his latest hobby, making his kids snort from laughing so hard.
